Christmas letter to all JP families

8.12.25

Dear Families of JPCE,

Thank you for your unwavering dedication to us as a family – both in school and beyond. The Rainbow promise helps teach that there is nothing really more important than your friends, family (and community). I believe that despite the complexities of our modern world, it is the human connections we build that will continue to make the most meaningful difference to children's lives and shape the adults they will become. From that all learning then can happen.

As we approach the end of term, I want to take a moment to celebrate all that we've achieved together. Every day over the past month has had an event- Fair, Nativities, Choir, panto, lunch, decorations, church visits just to name a few. Giving children the chance to share in the Christmas spirit is joyous and even more special when we get to share that with you and your families. We are delighted to see so many children and families in school at the moment and across the term. From nativity performances where shepherds remembered their lines (mostly!), to the angels who managed not to knock over the stable with their wings- in this and in many other ways we've created magical moments for our children and families. Living life in all its fullness is so important.

Our school has been transformed with festive lights and decorations, bringing warmth and joy during these darker months. There's something special about seeing our building lit up and welcoming, even if untangling those lights at the start of December did test our patience and problem-solving skills!

Christmas is often portrayed as a time for family celebration – and I know many of you will be looking forward to spending time with loved ones, whether that's enjoying peaceful moments together or bracing yourselves for the cheerful chaos that family gatherings can bring. (We all know that one relative who insists on discussing politics over Christmas dinner, or the children who are more excited about the wrapping paper than the gifts!)

While this holds true for many, it's important to remember that it can also be a period that brings reflection, regret and loss – feelings that can be particularly challenging. During this season, we can enjoy ourselves while also remembering those who may be experiencing loneliness, poverty, or struggling with their mental or physical health.

Thank you for all the extra miles you've gone this term – the donations, the rehearsals, the glitter (so much glitter!), and the countless ways you've made this season special for our children.

Please take good care of yourselves and those close to you. Travel safely.

Yours sincerely
Liz Savage
